1 Million yards produced with 100% recycled yarns

Bari continues to pave the way for textile industries to deploy more environment-friendly methods. New fabrics are developed using 100% recycled cotton and poly fibers, over 1 million yards already produced and shipped successfully, committed to produce over 1 million yards every month using 100% recycled fiber. We continue to invest in more ways to further increase the sustainability element in our business.

Only a limited amount of companies around the world claim to produce recycled fabric but they still dye and bleach their recycled materials, adding chemicals with high consumption of water.

On the other hand, Bari's textiles are being engineered and produced through 100% recycled materials, using zero virgin fiber in the process.

4 Million gallons of water saved

As of now, we are one of the leading companies to produce with 100% recycled materials. This recycled waste comes from fresh cotton and polyester textiles wastes or garments, through careful selection of products, Bari has eliminated the need for any type of dyeing or bleaching process, saving about 4 million gallons of water every month.
